Welcome to this 39th New England Circle, another in a series of these gatherings inaugurated here in this room more than a decade ago.

As it has been since that February evening in 1974, our purpose has remained steadfast: to provide a forum for the discussion of social, political, educational and literary topics that can lead to constructive change in our lives, our nation, and our world.

The foundations of the Circle were first built in the Nineteenth Century when Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Charles Dickens and other literary lions of their day gathered regularly at the Parker House for their Saturday Club sessions. Their traditions of a lively exchange of opinions and ideas in a hospitable and informal setting are still at the foundation of today's Circles: a private, non-profit activity which has welcomed more than 1,000 members from all corners of the region. It is a setting which encourages an easy and open exchange between the discussion leaders and every Circle guest.

This evening's discussion leaders, Massachusetts Congressman Barney Frank and New Hampshire Governor John H. Sununu, are two men of energy and achievement who can be counted on to produce a lively exchange on their own. Nevertheless, when they pause to catch their breath, your participation will be welcomed and encouraged.

There may be a few New Englanders who aren't quite sure of Barney Frank's current Congressional committee assignments, but there are very few indeed who don't know he's in Congress. Barney Frank is one of those individuals whose energy, wit, and commitment to his own high standards have made him very much his own man, as his fellow House members have been quick to recognize and respect. His fellow Democrats have named him the new President for Americans for Democratic Action.

As New Hampshire's hard-working governor, John Sununu has earned the same sort of respectful recognition. More than two-thirds of the State's voters returned him to office two years after he was first elected in 1982. He has made the system work well enough to not only win the allegiance of his fellow citizens, but also the compliments of his fellow Republican governors who have made him the chairman of their most prestigious organizations.

Please welcome them both to this evening's Circle, just as the Circle welcomes each of you.
