POWER

Dear Mr. M. Dunn,

What would you have to say to the Black people here at New Hampshire College?

Comment - Black people of New Hampshire College you must realize that the only way for your forces to operate is to unite. For no force of any kind can prevail against you if done. Black people you are not colored, nor Negroes, nor niggers, but black people who are capable of performing high aims and abilities. Yes, They say that you are fools for reaching out for a higher education, a group of ignorant people, and dancing dumbbells. But, you know who is the Fool and the Enemy.

Black people you know that there are social pressures in every part of this country and in life. Black people you have a mind and you must be able to Think for you are good thinkers and good speakers. And you are capable of performing what They say is impossible. Stand I say. Again stand and reach out for a higher education and whatever you want to achieve in life. For I say to you beautiful Black people, yes, you can and will reach higher heights. Right on!!

In the Struggle of the Oppressed People

SAVE THE WHALES

(The following excerpts are from The Houston Post, sent to New Hampshire College by the Animal Welfare Institute in Washington, D.C.)

Connoisseurs of bumper stickers may soon see a new one riding the roads: "Stop the Whale Killers. Boycott Japanese Goods." U. S. conservation groups have started boycotting Japanese radios, TVs, autos, motorcycles and cameras to protest Japan's setting its own quotas on the killing of whales in defiance of rulings of the 14-nation International Whaling Commission. Though Japan declares that whale meat satisfies the protein needs of its population, the statistics indicate that whale meat constitutes no more than 1.5 per cent of the country's animal protein intake. Several species of whales, meanwhile, are nearing extinction.

Russia and Japan account for 86% of the annual whale catch, and Russia's whaling fleets also continue to defy the Commission's regulations. It has been pointed out that a boycott of Soviet goods in this country would be pointless, as so few exist!

From: Norman Lister

COOPERATIVE EDUCATION

At a Workshop on Cooperative Education held at the Merrimack Valley Branch of UNH, Mr. J. Dudley Dawson, Consultant on Cooperative Education and formerly Vice President of Cooperative Education at Antioch College, offered the following description and analysis of Cooperative Education.

Highlights

Cooperative Education is an organized plan for combining study and work experience and can be both alternating and concurrent.

There can be a wide variety of work experiences under the cooperative education umbrella.

If the student pays tuition, he will want credit. The credit granted must be equitable with the credit granted for on campus activity.

Grading (A,B,C,D,F) is not recommended. The employer will exert too much influence and pressure. Pass/Fail is recommended.

Inter-personal skills are best learned on the job. Deficiency in this area is the chief reason for failure.

Cooperative Education gives an edge to the student going on to graduate school.

Cooperative Education students tend to demand a higher grade of teaching after they return to school.

Cooperative Education sets up a one on one relationship and provides an ideal setting for counseling before, during and after the coop. period.

It must be a productive experience as well as a learning experience. The employer demands this.

An excellent approach is to develop jobs the students are already on since the interest of the student and employer is likely to be high.

Campus internships are an excellent device.

Central coordination of departmental programs is needed.

Cooperative Education in Continuing Education can help mature students move from dead end jobs.

A term paper corrected and evaluated by a number of departments is a good device for evaluation of the coop. student.
