Welcome To New England Circle

This evening's discussion on Individual and Social Rights and The Tobacco Industry is led by LAURENCE H. TRIBE, Tyler professor of constitutional law at Harvard and Supreme Court litigator. Professor Tribe recently represented, pro bono, against three cigarette makers, the family of a woman who died of lung cancer after smoking for 42 years. The high court decided in favor of Tribe. Now, tobacco smokers can sue the tobacco industry for concealing fact or lying about the health dangers of smoking.

"The kinds of cases I agree to do are affected by what my beliefs are and by what interests me in terms of teaching and writing."

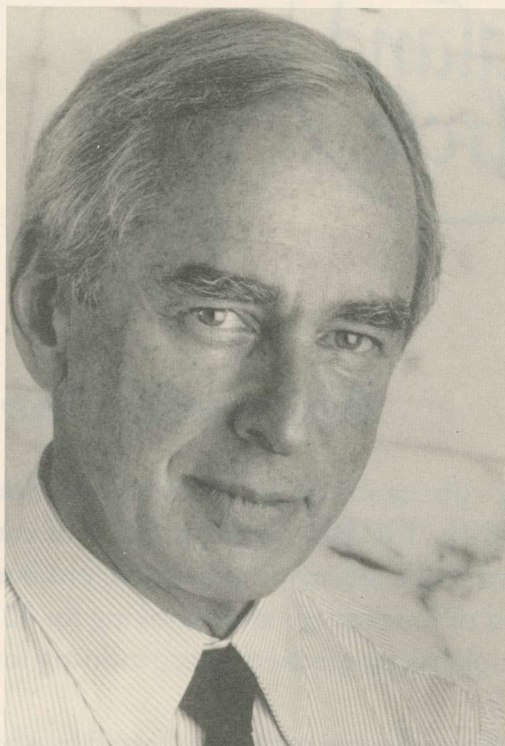

Widely known as a civil libertarian, Tribe's constitutional philosophy is eclectic. He has argued cases involving abortion counseling in federally funded clinics, federal protection for migrant farm workers, free speech rights of "dial-a-porn" services, gay rights advocacy, right of privacy for consensual sodomy, school busing, religious free speech, and the rights of press and public to attend criminal trials. Tribe has defended California's Nuclear Power Plant Moratorium as well as "big oil" against a state court judgment that violated principles of federalism. He has served as constitutional advisor to the Russian Federal Republic and the Government of Lithuania and has worked on creating and revising constitutions for the Marshall Islands and, more recently, Czechoslovakia.

Larry Tribe has been honored for distinction as "the foremost constitutional thinker of our time."

Tonight's moderator is MARJORIE CLAPPROOD, talk show host for WHDH Radio and New England Cable Network News. Well versed on numerous social issues, Ms. Clapprood is a former Massachusetts State Representative who has been named Legislator of the Year by the National Organization for Women, Massachusetts Coalition for Choice, Association for the Mentally Retarded, the Pharmaceutical Association, Elder Services and the Cardiac Rehabilitation Association. She has taught and lectured on health education and politics at Stonehill College, Clark University, the Kennedy School of Government and Boston College.

New England Circle invites women and men of different cultures, political persuasions and professions to exchange ideas and opinions. The Circle evolved out of a 19th century tradition called The Saturday Club, a group of concerned individuals such as Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and James Russell Lowell who gathered monthly at the Parker House for lively, informal discussions.

1992 Catherine A. Dunfey Award

Presented to:
Arnold Hiatt

Well known as a successful and innovative businessman with a social conscience and a commitment to public service, Arnold Hiatt, as president and CEO of The Stride Rite Corporation for twenty-five years, changed the traditional role of corporate leadership in America by pioneering the first day care center, clean air work environment, and intergenerational center. Last year, he redirected prime time advertising dollars to The American Library Association to encourage young children to read and use public libraries.

Leaving the helm of the corporation to take full reins as chairman of The Stride Rite Foundation, the philanthropic arm of the corporation, Mr. Hiatt has furthered his compassionate leadership to institute an employee volunteer program to tutor inner-city students on company time and a public service program to financially assist minority students at Harvard who commit to returning to the inner city to serve as role models and assume teaching and public service careers.

A believer that corporate and community well-being must converge, Mr. Hiatt reaches out to government. "More and more businessmen have to speak up and I'm hoping we can figure a way of making our collective voice influence Congress to make investments in ways that will benefit the community."

"The point is business can affect social change."

The Catherine A. Dunfey Award is given annually to a person or organization that exemplifies the personal courage, commitment and compassion of Catherine Dunfey: mother, grandmother and great grandmother of the Dunfey family. The Award designee will have demonstrated leadership, reflecting a significant and positive impact on a pressing human or social condition somewhere in the world. The recipient will also evidence the capacity to work closely with women and men of different races, ideologies, and professions while striving to bring about constructive change in our world.
