February 18, 1982

Welcome to the New England Circle and the start of our ninth Circle year . . .

Our purpose is to assemble for the discussion of social, political, literary and educational topics; our goal is to exchange ideas and opinions that lead to constructive change in our lives and in our nation.

This evening's topic is the people of Central America and El Salvador: that small, Central American nation whose internal turmoil has scattered refugees throughout the region while the Reagan Administration and the Congress debate this nation's policy.

Our Circle discussion leader — Bianca de Macias Jagger — brings a pivotal perspective to that debate. It originates in the villages of El Salvador's countryside, and in the villages of its neighbors: Costa Rica, Honduras, and Nicaragua. For more than a decade, since she worked to help Nicaraguan earthquake victims in 1972, Bianca has demonstrated a commitment to help the homeless of her region, whether they are victims of natural disaster, have been caught in the violent conflicts, like the Nicaraguan civil war in 1979, or the current battles in El Salvador.

She speaks with a voice of experience and place. Born in Nicaragua, she has grown up with revolutions. As a former staff member of the Nicaraguan Embassy in Paris — she holds a degree in political science from the Institut des Science Politiques in that city — Bianca brings unique qualifications to her chosen role as a spokesperson for Central America and its people, including the half million refugees currently fleeing El Salvador.

As a person whose commitment has been demonstrated over ten years in a number of Central American nations, Bianca has frequently been invited to share her insights with American institutions and policy makers. Recently, she was a panel member at the John F. Kennedy School of Government discussion of El Salvador. And, following her on-the-scene observations of an attack on refugees at the Honduran border, Bianca testified before an Intra-American Affairs sub-committee of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Bianca has demonstrated her concerns for human rights in the hope that when Americans are well enough informed about the problems and people of Central America, peace — not war — will come to the region.
